Don't move the Post Office

To the Editor:

I was still living in Carbondale when the Post Office was built, andit is the prettiest, most attractive building in Carbondale. The population is much less now than at that time, so it should be adequate for today's mail service.

A clean up job on the outside and inside would make it an outstanding landmark. The location could not be better and the money could be used for the library, for instance.

Dundaff Street certainly is not the most beautiful street in Carbondale and why make things more difficult for the residents?

Sincerely,

Olga Gallinot
